G.I. BILL NOW HISTORY

Wednesday marked the passing of the 1944 legislation known as the "G.I. Bill of Rights" which provided some sort of financial aid for approximately seven and a half million ex-service men.

The educational program cost the tax-payers about fourteen and a half billion dollars, to say nothing of loans to about 600,000 veterans for buying homes, or opening new businesses.

The G.I. Bill was good, or bad, according to one's point of view. Some consider it as pure socialism, while others proclaim it as one of the finest demonstrations of democracy ever undertaken.

Regardless of how inequitable it may have been it certainly relieved a post-war employment problem, and it has given us the best educated generation of men in history.

As an expression of the willingness of the American people to rehabilitate men who had to sacrifice their plans to fight for us it was the most noble piece of legislation ever passed by Congress.

And when we compare the cost with the fifty billions of dollars we have sent abroad in the form of foreign economic and military aid we can't shed any tears over some of the admitted waste in administering the program.

SALES REACH NEW HIGH LEVEL

Two United States departments, or bureaus, made announcements this week which are of interest to our readers. The Commerce Department reported retail sales for the first six months of 1956 reached a new high level, and the Department of Labor reported the cost of living on July 1st was the highest in history.

The Department of Agriculture made another announcement that doesn't sound too good in a farming county—production of farm products in 1956 will be below 1955.

If these announcements mean anything it is that the farm problem must be solved soon, or our prosperity will collapse.

For we can't have a well-rounded economy unless all segments of society share in the general welfare.

Industry has gradually learned that sharing of profits with producers does not mean that stockholders must be robbed, and consumers must learn we don't have to starve farmers in order to enjoy abundance.

Most folks were surprised last year when General Motors became the first corporation in history to report a profit of more than a billion dollars in a year.

It seemed to be the consensus of opinion that was an all-time record, that there would never again be the demand for cars that there was last year, and that the new wage contract introducing the annual wage principle for the first time, would cut profits substantially.

That opinion has been knocked into a cocked hat by the announcement this week that General Motors net profit for the first six months of 1956 topped a half billion dollars, or a slight increase over the first six months of 1955.

It now appears the automobile industry has not reached the saturation point. Sales are harder to make but those going after them are making them on a scale that compares favorably with last year.

If we can solve the farm problem there are several million family-sized farm operators who need, and would be able to buy, new automobiles, as well as modern household appliances.

We believe we have learned some economic lessons by experience and that steps will be taken to improve farm conditions this year. We also believe we can maintain the type of prosperity we are now enjoying for several years if we use common sense.

- SPORT PARADE -

By OSCAR FRALEY
United Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Fearless Fraley's facts and figures: Elbie Fletcher, former first baseman for the Braves and Pirates, admires Ted Williams but he is among those who feel that Williams "should quit baseball if he can't take the riding of the fans—particularly at these prices."

"I had guys 'on me' for years and I always felt that the smartest thing was to ignore them, no matter how hot they got," Fletcher explains. "Making juvenile gestures in return doesn't get you anywhere."

The major leaguers, according to Elbie, now a Boston salesmen, don't realize just how lucky they are.

Patterson vs. Moore
"If the players think they have roughed it until they hit the minors on their way down," he said sadly, "Then they'll know how rough things can really get."

The bout between Floyd Patterson and Archie Moore, which will decide the successor to Rocky Marciano's world heavyweight title, will become official next Friday when Patterson goes before the New York Boxing Commission and his fractured hand is okayed.

Meanwhile, that same night, Joey Giambra will "take" Rocky Castellani to get in line right behind Gene Fullmer for a shot at Ray Robinson's middleweight title. Tournament star Ed Furgol, who recently went to the semi-finals of the PGA golf championship, is considering three offers of which at least one is from a major club, Furgol, now at the Meager Westwood C. C. in St. Louis, is one of the great teachers of the game.

Sports And Business
British racing writers report that the victory of Argentina's El Chama in last fall's Washington International coat English horse breeders more than $200,000 in orders from American thoroughbred buyers. At least one American buyer cancelled a trip to Britain and headed instead to Latin America.

Dave Ragan, 21-year old University of Florida golf captain who won the Florida Open, has been incorporated for five years with funds supplied by a county judge, two salesmen and a dentist in Florida. They'll sponsor him for five years on the pro tour with the corporation declaring dividends out of his earnings. Instead of a program, now you can't tell the players without a Wall Street Journal.

One of the comebacks of the year is being made by Eddie Arcaro. The famed jockey in 1955 won 38 stake races, one less than Earl Sande's all-time record. Last year he fell off to a mere 11 stakes victories. However, this year he already has 19 to his credit with more ahead, a real comeback but, as one race observer said, "I didn't know he had been away."

huge U. S. 6th Fleet—if necessary. A high American official said he did not expect a decision "for perhaps 24 or 48 hours." The final word would have to come from Washington.

U. S. Navy headquarters in London confirmed that the 6th Fleet "always maintains a high state of readiness" but would not confirm reports it had been ordered on a standby alert.

There was growing support for a proposal that the Suez Canal be handed over to an international management. Such a management would have strong Egyptian representation and probably much greater financial benefits for Egypt than it received from the old Suez Canal company.

The subcommittee called a meeting for this morning and was ordered to report to the senior diplomats at their second formal session later. The diplomats were to meet with Prime Minister Sir Anthony Eden at noon.

Eden himself had planned to report to Parliament today on the Big Three talks but, informed sources said he tentatively postponed the report until Tuesday afternoon.

Besides the military and naval talks, other subcommittees worked on economic policy toward Egypt, possible appeals to the United Nations and the World Court and technical details of canal shipping.

Officials refused to disclose the identity of the members of the individual groups, but British attached significance to the fact that Mr. Walter Boone, commander of the U. S. Eastern Atlantic and Mediterranean fleet.

Boone's Mediterranean force, the U. S. 6th Fleet, is the largest striking force in the vicinity of the Middle East trouble areas.

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles already has given an implied warning to "Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser against interfering directly with the movement of ships through the canal."

"This would be a matter of deep concern to the United States as one of the maritime nations," he said Sunday.

Other major developments: In London the Egyptian Embassy issued a formal statement saying Egypt has the "obvious object" of keeping the canal open so there will be no threat of foreign intervention in its seizure of the waterway.

In Cairo the Egyptian high command cancelled officers leaves and ordered its garrisons along the Suez on a state of alert. A formal state of emergency had been in force in the canal defense zone since Nasser nationalized the waterway Thursday night.

In Paris, the French government froze all Egyptian funds in France. French newspapers demanded drastic action against Egypt.

Redlegs In Good Spot As Braves, Dodgers In Fight

By FRED DOWN

United Press Sports Writer
The Cincinnati Redlegs today moved into a strong spot "to get healthy" while the Milwaukee Braves and Brooklyn Dodgers may split each other's throats. The Redlegs gained ground on both contenders when they beat the Pittsburgh Pirates, 6-1 and 3-2, Sunday. Now they face the Bucs and last-place New York Giants while the Braves and Dodgers play a four-game series. The Redlegs have an 11-5 season's edge over the Pirates, whom they meet tonight, and a 9-5 margin over the Giants.

Brooks Lawrence won his 15th game and, Buster Freeman his eighth as the Redlegs beat the Pirates and sliced the first-place Braves' lead to 2 1/2 games. The Dodgers, four games behind Milwaukee, split a doubleheader with the Chicago Cubs while the Braves doubled home Gus Bell in the ninth inning to win the nightcap and extend the Redlegs' winning streak to four games.

Curt Simmons spun a six-hitter and struck out seven batters to give the Phillies their ninth victory in 15 meetings with Milwaukee. Roy Smalley's second triple of the game was the key blow of the Phillies' three-run eighth-inning rally that handed Warren his eighth defeat.

Don Newcombe scored his 15th win and the 100th of his career when Pee Wee Reese's eighth-inning homer gave the Dodgers a 1-0 verdict but three unearned runs helped the Cubs win the nightcap, 4-2.

Stan Musial singled home Don Blasingame in the 10th as the St. Louis Cardinals shaded the Giants, 3-2, in the other NL game.

In the American League, the New York Yankees celebrated Manager Casey Stengel's birthday a day early with a 5-3 triumph over the Kansas City Athletics. Bill Skowron hit two homers and Hank Bauer one for the Yankees. Bob Turley fanned nine to win his fifth game for the Yankees, who still hold a nine-game lead over the second-place Cleveland Indians.

Herb Score pitched a four-hitter and Hank Aguirre a seven-hitter to enable the Indians to sweep the Baltimore Orioles, 3-0 and 4-0.

Billy Pierce became the first major league pitcher to win 16 games with an 11-2 victory as the Chicago White Sox swept their doubleheader with the Boston Red Sox by winning the nightcap, 6-3.

Dean Stone pitched a four-hitter to give the Washington Senators a 4-1 win after Billy Hoft fanned 14 and pitched his third shutout of the year as the Detroit Tigers won their opener, 6-0.

However, it was learned that under the advice of the new president of the school, Novice G. Favest, Hayes changed his position.

He has agreed to furnish the conference a written report, listing to the best of his memory, the names of the players who received money and the amount each received.

No Penalties Expected
It was indicated the conference would not reveal the identity of the players, and conference Commissioner Kenneth L. "Tug" Wilson earlier promised Hayes that he would not penalize the players for accepting the money.

Ohio State also has made progress toward rectifying another violation involved in the probation, it was learned.

Approximately 20 players were paid for work which was not performed, and under the penalty, they were ruled ineligible until they have made up the work for which they were paid before they performed the jobs.

It was understood the athletes were to work 12 hours a week on their jobs during the school year, and were paid a flat rate. They were to work five hours weekly during the football season.

Some athletes have completed repaying the unworked hours, while others may have to return to the campus early to fulfill the terms.

Ujied all the rooms. Cots were put up in the halls. The charred bodies of the dead were placed in the National Guard Armory and Guards were placed around the area to keep the curious away.

Hospital attendants said today all 31 injured had been taken off the critical list.

One of the injured was a boy, George Ochs, 11. He was in the area watching his father, volunteer fireman Herman Ochs. Six of the volunteer firemen killed were from the Dumas Fire Department, and four were from the Sunray Fire Dept. Both the Sunray fire chief, Ray Biles, 40, and the Dumas fire marshal, Pascal Pool, 31, died.

The other dead were Shamrock Oil Company employees except for one man listed as a pipeline worker.

The blast ignited three other storage tanks, one containing 80,000 barrels and the other two 10,000 barrels of oil, but by late Sunday night the only tank still burning was the pentane tank. Flames flared 100 ft 200 feet into the air as firemen waited for it to burn out.

Bodies were frozen in distorted positions, arms flung over their faces in a last desperate attempt to shield them from the intense heat. The knees of some were drawn up in agony. Many were charred beyond recognition.

The injured were taken to the Moore County Hospital where they

Hayes Will Account For "Pin" Money

By ED SAINSBURY

United Press Sports Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — Football Coach Woody Hayes of Ohio State has agreed to furnish the Big Ten as much information as possible about "out of pocket" money he gave his players over the past five years, it was learned today.

Hayes' consent to provide the information was a major step toward conference action to lift the probation imposed upon the school last April for violation of work-study regulations applying to athletes.

The Buckeyes' conference grid champions for the past two seasons, were placed on probation for a minimum of one year and were ruled ineligible for the Rose Bowl for the period of probation as a result of the Big Ten probe.

Investigation Being Pressed
National Collegiate Athletic Association officials were pressing an investigation into the case this week.

Hayes originally told the conference that he could not remember what players received money, or how much each received, although he admitted his gifts averaged around $400 per year since he became the Buckeye coach. He also told the conference that he was unwilling to reveal the information.

However, it was learned that under the advice of the new president of the school, Novice G. Favest, Hayes changed his position.

He has agreed to furnish the conference a written report, listing to the best of his memory, the names of the players who received money and the amount each received.

TVA WEEKLY NEWS LETTER

Horseshoe Properties, a 20,732-acre tract in east Tennessee which has served as a forest management demonstration for the past 10 years, has increased its saw-timber volume from 23,300,000 board feet to 53,300,000 in that period, according to a report of this demonstration just issued. The report was prepared by TVA, and the Tennessee Division of Forestry.

The forest properties are located on Walden Ridge, about 15 miles north of Chattanooga. Originally, Z. Carter Patten, owner of the properties and a Chattanooga business man, acquired 1200 acres in 1943. He increased this to more than 17,000 acres by 1945 when an inventory was taken by TVA and the Tennessee Division of Forestry. Since then he has acquired several thousand more acres.

The 1945 inventory showed an average of 109 trees per acre four inches and up in diameter. Estimated sawtimber volume was 23,300,000 board feet.

In 1955 another inventory was taken by a firm of private consultants employed by Mr. Patten, which would be comparable to the first one. This showed 138 trees per acre four inches and up in diameter. Estimated saw-timber volume was 53,300,000 board feet.

The report states that the properties in 1955 showed a lack of growing stock, heavy damage from fire and grazing, and little hope of immediate financial returns. Mr. Patten signed a contract with the State for fire protection and renewed it annually until county-wide protection was extended to the area. In other ways he supplemented state protective measures.

He improved the property through removal of damaged and otherwise poor quality timber, planted 270,000 seedlings to help the growing stock, maintained truck trails and roads, and in time with his belief in multiple use, he planted game, stocked streams and built several fish ponds.

During the developmental years his expenses exceeded timber income by an average of $2300 a year. This was offset from coal deposits on the property. A new management plan has been devised for the coming 10 years. It calls for a harvest of 14.5 million board feet and an increase in growing stock from the present 53 million board feet to 73 million. Income from timber is expected to gross $135,000. Expenses are estimated at $75,000. Net return from coal is expected to be about $20,000. This means the average annual net return will be $80,000; the comparable figure for the past 10 years is $119.

Fifty-nine citizens of 16 foreign countries were given intensive training periods by TVA during the fiscal year 1956, which ended June 30, TVA said today. Most of the trainees were in the country under sponsorship of the International Cooperation Administration.

The trainees studied with TVA for periods ranging from 1 to 9 weeks; average period was 3 weeks. All except nine studied with engineering, power, or chemical engineering divisions. The nine were interested in administration of a multiple purpose resource development program.

Formosa was represented by 14; Korea by 11; India 8; Pakistan 7; Indonesia 5; Egypt, Iran, Iraq 2 each, and Ceylon, Costa Rica.

CHAPTER 20
BILL DUVAL was seated at the small table they had taken when they came on board Alvarez yacht. Rita's evening bag lay there on the table—he had told her he would watch it while she danced. In placing fresh drinks on the table, the waiter knocked the bag to the floor. He looked at Bill Duval in surprise. Had Duval jostled his arm, made him clumsy?

Bill reached to help him pick up the contents—a compact, a Monette of perfume, a billfold, a handkerchief. And a roll of bills under a rubber band. There was a twenty on the outside. It was all new money. Bill looked at the roll, his heart accelerated. He began putting the things back in the purse, trying to maintain his poker-faced expression. The waiter had placed the drinks on the table before him and gone. Bill deftly removed the outside bill from the roll, slipped one from his pocket to take its place, hoping his little manipulation had been so quick that it had been unnoticed. But he was wrong. Priscilla had looked his way just in time to see him slip the bill from the roll. Someone got in her way and she did not see the substitution. A chill went up and down her spine as she thought in astonishment. Why, the man in dishonest—He's taking money from Rita's bag.

Maneuvering Pete over to the table where Bill sat alone, she said, "Pete, stay here and talk to Bill. I'm going to the powder room to get my make-up." She picked up Rita's bag, and her eyes met Bill's for a mere flicker of an instant. She thought he looked a little disconcerted.

Inside the powder room, she opened the bag with fingers that trembled, slipped the band from the roll of bills and counted them. Rita had said she was taking the money with her because she did not want to leave it at the cottage. The money was all there, all twenty of the bills. She felt a little chagrined; she had been so positive that she had seen Bill remove that bill. Had one of them become detached and he had just replaced it? It could have happened that way, of course. She experienced a decided sense of relief. Now it would not be necessary to tell Rita about it. She didn't particularly like Bill Duval, but she thought Rita did.

Peggy was slipping a Coke. Her position in the contour chair was not graceful, but comfortable. It was also indicative of contentment. But her eyes were restless, her voice not as inquisitive as usual, when she said, "How you did rush Priscilla last night!" From his precarious perch on the party table, Pete, likewise slipping a Coke, grinned and said, "In that, I seem to have followed the herd."

The remark did not please Peggy, but there was no change of expression as she said, "Including Dick?"

"Yeah, especially Dick. He looked at her for a moment, then he said, 'Maybe he's like me. Like a little warm.'"

"She's that kind?" Peggy asked, a half-smile playing around her lips.

"There you go again! You're jealous. And you needn't look so indignant! I didn't mean jealous where I am concerned, maybe not even of Dick, but of the attention Priscilla got last night. She's darned attractive, and on top of it, a very nice girl."

Surprisingly, Peggy said, "Yes, I think she is. And people at the party liked her. Trust Apalachicola people to make strangers feel welcome. But Rita—well, I can't help wondering about her. She seemed so very friendly with Alvarez—as if she might have known him a long time. I could tell by the way Bill watched them that he thought so, too. There's something—"

"She stopped, then she said, 'Pete, don't you feel there's something queer about those girls being here?'"

"You've been exercising your brain lately, haven't you? Wondering about people."

"Stop being sarcastic. I don't care if I'm lazy."

"Can't figure why any man would want to marry you—you'd be a lousy housekeeper."

Peggy looked at him through almost closed eyes. "I don't plan to marry a man who's looking for a housekeeper." Her voice was severe, undisturbed.

"Well, a doctor doesn't especially need a wife who wants to dance all night and daydream in hammocks all day."

Peggy smiled. "Let the doctor decide that. And don't tell me that I'm losing you both at the same time."

Pete got up, flexed his arms, kicked a footstool out of the way. His voice matched hers for nonchalance when he said, "You've never had a serious thought about me—I realize that now. And I and Priscilla quite likeable. If I

College Important To Woman's Future As Well As Man's

MADISON, Wis. — "You've probably heard someone say, 'She shouldn't go to college because she'll get married someday.'"

Mrs. Mark G. Troxell, dean of women at the University of Wisconsin, deprecates this attitude.

"What good is a woman's education?" she asked a group of 500 co-eds.

"Most importantly it is something to live her life by, married or single, employed or unemployed. It is an anchor to windward in those days in which many of you now see your mothers—those days women cannot escape except by dying young—the days when the husband puts on his hat and leaves for his day's work and the house is as silent as a tomb because the children have reached the point of no return, the point where the mother is not necessary to them in the old dependent sense because they are grown up."

"The woman who has kept her capacities alive through either formal or informal education ends that happy chapter and starts a new one full of different but just as exciting adventure."

"She said women are educated for the same reason as men and that a woman is more effective if educated."

"Both sexes can learn, so you educate them partly because Satan finds work not only for idle hands but also for empty heads," she said. "You educate them because people are more effective, educated than those same people would be uneducated—and it's fun to learn. I mention this last item because I know how important it is at your age whether or not a thing is fun."

Coloring Books Are Now Criticized

NEW YORK — "Coloring books, a childhood institution as old as bubble gum, get a severe smudging from one art educator."

Dr. Victor Lowenfeld, says they only put a straight-jacket on a child's creative instincts.

Dr. Lowenfeld, director of art education at Pennsylvania State University, said that "research shows more than half of all the children who have been exposed to coloring books lose confidence in their creativeness."

Writing in the current issue of the magazine "2- to 5 World News," he warned parents of small children that the books "make the child inflexible."

He said that as most parents know many children love coloring books.

"By the same token, children prefer sweets to vegetables, but this doesn't mean that we should adjust their diets to sweets," he added.

Grocers Say We Get More For Less Than 30 Years Ago
CHICAGO — "Americans today get more and better food for less money than they did 30 years ago," the National Association of Retail Grocers says.

Mrs. Marie Kiefer, secretary-manager of the association reported to the NARGUS convention in Chicago, that "twenty-five per cent of disposable income still goes for food." But if we bought the same types and amounts of food we bought a generation ago, we'd be spending less than 20 per cent of our income for food," she said.

Mrs. Kiefer pointed out that an hour's take-home pay 30 years ago bought 5 1/2 loaves of bread, 1 1/2 pounds of steak, or 1 1/2 pounds of chicken. Today, an hour's pay will buy 10 loaves of bread, two pounds of steak, or three pounds of chicken.

"So actually," she concluded, "we are spending less for our income for more and better food."

The NARGUS spokesman said some consumers have the mistaken impression that food prices appear to remain high because of "middle-man profiteering."

"Profit actually is the smallest part of what the consumer pays for any good product," she added. "Foodmen put 50 per cent of their profit—or more—right back into their business."

Mrs. Kiefer blamed the "seemingly high food prices on 'substantial wage increases in food processing and marketing industries.'"

It wasn't Jackson, but it was Willie Gillard, 28, who has escaped from another prison farm.
